Editorial

BRIAN D. DAVISON

At the end of 2017, Marianne Winslett stepped down as co-editor-in-chief, and I thank her sincerely for her efforts and for the experience of working with her for three years. She was a great counterpoint both in topical expertise and in managing the responsibilities at Transactions on the Web (TWEB). This year marks the start of my second term, and I welcome three senior Associate Editors (Michael Rabinovich, Pierangela Samarati, and Ryen White) to assist by taking on additional responsibilities.

The editorial board continues to grow and adapt. I thank those who have stepped down in the past three years, including Krishna Gummadi, Vanja Josifovski, Ling Liu, Ioana Manolescu, Peter Patel-Schneider, Prasant Shenoy, Matthew Smith, and Andrew Tomkins, for their years of service, and I am glad to formally announce those who have since joined the board, namely Marlon Dumas, Bernardo Cuenca Grau, Apu Kapadia, Tie-Yan Liu, Qiaozhu Mei, and Ben Zhao. Watch for more changes in the coming months.

As we start our twelfth year, TWEB continues to do well. We are now publishing more extensions to conference best papers and continue to be a highly sought venue for all kinds of web-related research articles. As of this writing, our articles have been downloaded nearly 190,000 times. Authors can make their articles open access for a fee or can give ACM publication rights at no cost. We continue to work to improve the response time for decisions on submissions. So keep sending us your best work.
